| You are being prompted for an exam password.                         | You are being prompted for an exam password. This usually happens if the Proctorio Extension is not installed correctly. Please install the Proctorio Extension.
If you are getting this error, but already have the extension installed, please try uninstalling and reinstalling the extension.
*Check your Chrome settings to ensure “Allow in Incognito” option is selected in the Chrome settings of your Proctorio Extension. Chrome settings > Extensions > (Proctorio) Details > Allow in incognito.

| Connection fails during the Systems Diagnostics Test                 | Assuming that your internet is connected and working properly, simply refreshing the page can help solve this issue. If the issue persists, try closing out of and quitting Chrome, restarting your computer, and then try to access the exam again.
If you are having network issues, please contact your cable provider for assistance.
|
| The webcam or microphone fails during the Systems Diagnostics Test   | Check your Chrome settings to ensure that Blackboard is allowed under the Site Settings for Camera and Microphone.
If they are not allowed, then that is the issue.
If they are allowed, test the hardware in a separate program after closing Chrome (Zoom, Camera App, Sound Recorder, etc.)
If they do not work in other applications, then it is likely an issue with the hardware or driver. Try restarting your computer and reach out to the IT help desk if the issue persists. |

| You’re receiving a message that your computer does not have enough RAM or enough battery to continue. | To avoid this message, you may want to consider completely shutting down your computer and charging it the night before an exam.
If you have not had a chance to do this, you should be able to continue your exam by simply acknowledging that you have seen this message. Low RAM has not been seen as a cause for a Proctorio computer crash. |
